Strengthen healthcare in your community

The Master of Health Administration (MHA) is a flexible, primarily online, course-based graduate degree designed for working health sector professionals.

Program Overview

- Nine interactive online courses
- Average time commitment of 8 -15 hours per week per course
- Two brief (three-day) in-person residencies with hands-on learning, case studies, and networking opportunities
- Full-time or part-time study options
- Up to six years to complete the degree
- Courses offered in Fall, Winter, and Spring

Master of Health Administration

The Johnson Shoyama Graduate School of Public Policy in partnership with the File Hills Qu'Appelle Tribal Council and the University of Regina is proud to welcome our first-ever Indigenous MHA cohort — created to support Indigenous professionals and students who want to lead change in health systems serving our communities.

Rooted in Connection and Community

- Opportunities to gather in person and/or remotely, at least once per semester to foster connection and community.
- A dedicated online site on the University of Regina's learning management system where students can share information and resources and connect with one another informally, at their own time and pace.
- Opportunities to learn and engage with Elders, Knowledge Keepers, and community leaders along with cultural gatherings.
- A dedicated faculty and/or staff member to coordinate cohort activities and serve as a regular point of contact for students.
- Access to all University of Regina student services and resources

Applied and Experiential Learning

- Build leadership capacity to strengthen and improve Indigenous and population health outcomes.
- Examine Indigenous health policy in historical, social, cultural, and political contexts with reflection on reconciliation and health equity.
- Visit All Nations' Healing Hospital during residency and learn from Indigenous health leaders integrating Western and traditional healing practices.
- Apply your learning through case studies, placements, and mentorship to address health system challenges affecting our communities.

Entry Pathways

We recognize diverse educational and professional journeys.

- Bachelor's Route: Four-year degree (70% average) along with three years of relevant health sector experience.
- Mid-Career Route: Considerable relatable healthcare experience (typically 7–15 years) without a bachelor's degree.
